

AS SEEN IN

November, 2005

TAKE NOTE:

What's new to do (or buy) around town

Wish I May.

Now there's no need to roast five turkeys so that every kid at the Thanksgiving table will get a chance at breaking the wishbone for good luck. Well, we know you've never actually done that, but local businessman Ken Ahroni of the Lucky Break Wishbone Corp. is betting that your family has endured some squabbles around who gets first dibs on the most prized part of the turkey's skeleton.

Lucky Break Wishbones are synthetic wish-bones that come in packages of 4-15 and would make an unusual party favor or inexpensive stocking stuffer. They're made in the U.S., look pretty much like the real thing and – most important -- they break with a satisfying snap. $3.99-$11.25. To purchase, call 1-866-LUCKY-WISH or visit www.luckybreakwishbone.com.

